

The Twelve Universal Laws Of Success Herbert Harris

Introduction: Unlocking Your Potential with Timeless Principles

In a world overflowing with self-help advice, quick fixes, and motivational gurus, it is rare to find a framework that is both profoundly spiritual and intensely practical. The Twelve Universal Laws Of Success Herbert Harris offers exactly that—a timeless blueprint for personal and professional transformation. Herbert Harris, a respected author, educator, and spiritual leader, distilled centuries of metaphysical wisdom into twelve actionable principles. Unlike the commonly cited Law of Attraction alone, Harris’s system delves deeper into the mechanics of consciousness, energy, and intentional living. These laws are not just abstract concepts; they are universal truths that govern success in every area of life, from career and relationships to health and inner peace. By understanding and applying these laws, you move from passive wishing to active co-creation. This article will explore each of the twelve laws in depth, revealing how you can integrate them into your daily routine to achieve lasting fulfillment and abundance.

The Foundation: What Are the Universal Laws of Success?

Before diving into each law, it is essential to understand the philosophical foundation. Herbert Harris teaches that the universe operates on immutable principles—much like the law of gravity. These principles are non-denominational; they work regardless of your belief system. The Twelve Universal Laws Of Success Herbert Harris are derived from ancient Hermetic teachings, metaphysical Christianity, and practical psychology. They provide a holistic approach to success that aligns your inner world (thoughts, beliefs, emotions) with your outer reality (actions, results, experiences). When you live in harmony with these laws, you naturally attract opportunities, overcome obstacles, and manifest your highest potential.

Why These Laws Are Different

Many modern success programs focus on goal-setting or positive thinking in isolation. Harris’s system emphasizes the interconnectedness of mind, spirit, and action. It addresses the root causes of failure, such as limiting beliefs, energetic blocks, and misalignment with one's true purpose. The twelve laws are not a checklist; they are a way of being. As you read through them, consider how each one applies to your current life situation. The real power lies in consistent practice, not just intellectual understanding.

Law 1: The Law of Thinking

The first law states that your thoughts are the creative force in your life. As you think, so you become. Herbert Harris teaches that thought is the most powerful energy in the universe. Every creation begins as a thought, whether it is a business, a relationship, or a work of art. To succeed, you must consciously direct your thinking toward what you desire, rather than dwelling on fear, lack, or doubt. Success is not a matter of luck; it is a matter of mental discipline. This law encourages daily practices like visualization, affirmations, and mindfulness to rewire the subconscious mind.

- Monitor your dominant thoughts throughout the day.
- Replace negative self-talk with empowering statements.
- Visualize your goals as already achieved.

Law 2: The Law of Supply

This law reveals that the universe is infinitely abundant. There is no shortage of opportunities, resources, or love. The apparent lack in the world is an illusion created by limited thinking. According to The Twelve Universal Laws Of Success Herbert Harris, you can tap into the universal supply by cultivating a consciousness of gratitude and generosity. When you give freely—whether it is time, money, or kindness—you open yourself to receive even more. Scarcity thinking blocks the flow; abundance thinking invites it. To apply this law, practice tithing, volunteer work, or simply say “thank you” for everything you have.

Practical Steps to Activate the Law of Supply

1. Start a gratitude journal.
2. Give something away without expecting anything in return.
3. Affirm: “The universe is infinitely abundant, and I am open to receive.”

Law 3: The Law of Attraction

Perhaps the most famous of the twelve laws, the Law of Attraction states that like attracts like. Your energy—vibrations of thoughts and emotions—attracts corresponding experiences. If you emit fear, you attract fearful situations; if you emit love and confidence, you attract positive relationships and opportunities. Herbert Harris emphasizes that this law works with precision. It is not about wanting something; it is about becoming the person who already has it. To master this law, align your feelings, actions, and beliefs with your desired outcome. For example, if you seek financial freedom, feel rich now, act responsibly with money, and believe you deserve prosperity.

Law 4: The Law of Faith

Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. This law teaches that you must believe in your success even before it manifests physically. Faith is not blind optimism; it is a deep inner knowing based on spiritual understanding. When you have faith in the universal laws, you release anxiety and trust the process. Herbert Harris explains that faith activates the creative power within you. It gives you the courage to take risks and persist through setbacks. Build your faith by recalling past successes, studying inspiring stories, and affirming that all things are working together for your good.

Law 5: The Law of Action

Thought and faith without action are incomplete. The Law of Action demands that you take inspired steps toward your goals. This does not mean frantic, fearful doing; it means purposeful, aligned action. Herbert Harris distinguishes between ego-driven action (based on fear or control) and spirit-led action (based on intuition and guidance). When you act in harmony with the other laws, your efforts are multiplied. Even small, consistent actions create momentum. Ask yourself daily: “What is one step I can take today that moves me closer to my vision?” Then do it without hesitation.

Law 6: The Law of Cause and Effect

Every cause has an effect; every effect has a cause. This is the law of karma, or sowing and reaping. Your current circumstances are the result of past choices. Conversely, the choices you make now will shape your future. The Twelve Universal Laws Of Success Herbert Harris teaches that you are not a victim of fate; you are the cause of your life. To utilize this law, take full responsibility for everything—not as blame, but as empowerment. When you understand that your actions create reactions, you become more deliberate. Plant seeds of kindness, hard work, and integrity, and you will harvest a life of fulfillment.

- Identify areas where you have played the victim.
- List three positive actions you can take today to change your outcomes.
- Reflect on past effects and trace them back to their causes.

Law 7: The Law of Compensation

This law is closely related to cause and effect but focuses on the principle of balance. You are compensated in direct proportion to the value you give to others. Herbert Harris teaches that true wealth comes from service. The more you contribute to the world, the more you receive—not just money, but also joy, recognition, and fulfillment. Don't ask, "What can I get?" Instead ask, "How can I serve?" When you add value consistently, the universe ensures you are rewarded. This law discourages cutthroat competition and encourages collaboration and generosity.

Law 8: The Law of Non-Resistance

Struggling against life's circumstances creates more resistance. The Law of Non-Resistance states that you should go with the flow of universal energy. This does not mean passivity; it means flexibility and acceptance. When you resist what is, you waste energy and create suffering. By accepting present conditions while still working toward improvement, you conserve power and open doors. Herbert Harris compares this to sailing: you cannot change the wind, but you can adjust your sails. Practice non-resistance by letting go of the need to control others, forgiving past hurts, and adapting to change with grace.

Law 9: The Law of Forgiveness

Forgiveness is essential for success because resentment blocks the flow of abundance and love. This law teaches that you must forgive everyone, including yourself, to move forward. Holding grudges is like drinking poison and expecting the other person to die. The Twelve Universal Laws Of Success Herbert Harris explains that forgiveness does not condone wrongdoing; it releases you from the prison of the past. When you forgive, you free your energy to create new possibilities. Make a forgiveness practice—write a letter (you don't have to send it), say a prayer, or simply declare: "I forgive and I am free."

Law 10: The Law of Alignment

Your thoughts, words, and actions must be in alignment with your true purpose and values. When you are out of alignment, you experience inner conflict, confusion, and stagnation. Herbert Harris emphasizes that success is not just external achievement; it is the expression of your authentic self. Identify your core values and life mission. Then ensure that your daily choices reflect them. If you value health but eat junk food, you are misaligned. If you value creativity but work in a rigid environment, realign. The law of alignment brings coherence: your whole being moves in the same direction, and success flows naturally.

Law 11: The Law of Persistence

Nothing worthwhile happens overnight. The Law of Persistence reminds you that consistent effort over time is the key to mastery. Herbert Harris teaches that persistence is the bridge between vision and reality. Many people give up just before their breakthrough. Cultivate the quality of never giving up, while remaining flexible in your methods. Keep your eyes on the goal, but be willing to change your approach. Persistence is fueled by passion and faith. When you encounter obstacles, view them as tests of your commitment. Keep going—the universe rewards those who do not quit.

How to Build Persistence

1. Break big goals into small daily habits.
2. Remind yourself of your "why" every morning.
3. Surround yourself with supportive people.
4. Celebrate small wins along the way.

Law 12: The Law of Divine Love

The final law is the crown of the entire system. Divine Love is the ultimate creative force. It is unconditional, all-encompassing, and the source of all other laws. When you operate from love—love for yourself, others, and life—you align with the highest vibration. Fear, hatred, and jealousy lower your energy and block success. Herbert Harris insists that love is not a sentimental feeling but a powerful action: kindness, compassion, and service. Practice loving without conditions. Forgive freely, give generously, and see the divine in everyone. When you make love your guiding principle, all other laws fall into place effortlessly.

Conclusion: Integrating the Laws into Your Life

The Twelve Universal Laws Of Success Herbert Harris are not a one-time read; they are a lifelong practice. Each law interlocks with the others, forming a comprehensive system for holistic success. Start by focusing on one law each week. Meditate on it, journal about it, and take small actions aligned with it. Over time, these laws will become second nature. You will notice a shift in your mindset, your relationships, and your results. Remember, success is not a destination; it is a way of living in harmony with universal truth. By embracing these twelve principles, you unlock your highest potential and contribute meaningfully to the world. The power is within you—now go and create.
